when I thought I had found some satisfaction in the journey of researching and completing this revision, I had to stop. I was on page 226 of my red-yellow-white spiral-bound notebook when I realized I had nothing else to write about. You may be thinking that I have lost the excitement and thrill of the process because my life is not yet fraught with contradictions.
But the truth is, this is my life. I've lived with it for more than thirty years and I find it fascinating. I love talking to my clients about the similar things I have lived through and the surprising ways in which our stories can intersect. Nothing New This is a journey that repeats itself over and over. People who have been in the business of healing all their lives experience similar emotions and sensations. There are moments of deep grief when a client tries to move forward without a vision of what can be, but these feelings are Nena Neuporitz (born Nena Hemming; 1882–1959) was a German composer, pianist, teacher and literary scholar. Life and work Nena Hemming was born in Dresden into a prosperous family. She studied music at the Dresden Conservatory with Hans von Bülow, Georg Matz and Hans Kindler, and received a gold medal at the Triebenseim School. She taught piano at the conservatory, then took up the chair of music theory and history at the Dresden Art Academy (Kunstakademie), where her students included Ernst Toch, Maria Nikolova, and Margarete Tietze. During the 1930s Neuporitz engaged in writing on music history, and lectured on the music of Béla Bartók. Her pupils included Anja Belli, Moritz Moszkowski, Hans Kremer, and Walter Braunfels. She died in Stendal. Neuporitz's music consists of around thirty piano works, chamber works and songs. Works in the style of Schönberg, Richard Strauss and Schoenberg have been published.
