The immobilisation of the hybrid polydiacetylene/thiol polymers onto glass substrates is usually achieved through the formation of an intermediary polymer film. Langmuir-Blodgett is a suitable alternative technique to the Langmuir-Blodgett technique for the oriented immobilisation of a polydiacetylene on a surface. The influence of the different variables (thiol type and concentration, oil concentration, and polymer area) on the quality of the Langmuir-Blodgett technique was investigated. The topographical, structural, and optical characterisation of the Langmuir-Blodgett layer revealed a very good reproduction of the surface of the glass used as a substrate, reproducible repeated deposition of diacetylene monolayers, and an
