Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an image pickup apparatus and an image pickup method. 2. Description of the Related Art As an image pickup apparatus, there has been known a video camera or the like in which a vibration device is provided in an image pickup apparatus main body to perform blurring correction. An image pickup optical system is attached to the image pickup apparatus main body, and the vibration device includes a vibrating unit (for example, a vibration coil, a vibrator, a piezoelectric element, and the like) to vibrate the image pickup optical system. The vibrating unit vibrates the image pickup optical system in a plurality of directions (for example, a vertical direction, a horizontal direction, and the like) using a drive current which is output from a drive circuit. This vibrates the image pickup optical system in a plane direction perpendicular to a long axis direction of the image pickup optical system. Therefore, the image pickup optical system can be vibrated in the plane direction, whereby blurring can be corrected. On the other hand, the image pickup optical system has an optical axis which is oriented perpendicularly to the plane direction. In addition, the image pickup optical system has a first surface and a second surface which are arranged side by side along the long axis direction. As long as a drive current to vibrate the image pickup optical system is generated, the first surface and the second surface of the image pickup optical system move toward each other and toward an image pickup unit. Accordingly, the image pickup optical system as a whole moves in the plane direction and the long axis direction. The motion of the image pickup optical system in the plane direction or the long axis direction causes a so-called lens creep, and its influence is known as imaging shift (see Japanese Patent

Laid-Open No. 7-66337). The imaging shift is a phenomenon in which a moving direction of a lens unit in a plane direction or a direction along
